

Content Brain + Call Corpus Insights

Two tools, one workflow. Content Brain is your library and your voice: everything you've ever made, in your own voice. Call Corpus Insights is your radar and your scoreboard: what your market is actually telling you, in real numbers. One is your output. The other is your market's input. Together they are the full picture.

01 Two tools, two jobs

Content Brain

YOUR LIBRARY & YOUR VOICE

Pulls in everything you've published (videos, podcast, newsletter, site, files), transcribes it, tags it to your frameworks, and distills your Voice DNA so anything written from here on sounds like you.

"What have I said, and how do I sound?"

Call Corpus Insights

YOUR RADAR & YOUR SCOREBOARD

Turns your call transcripts into a verified dataset, then answers pattern questions with computed numbers, not impressions, and keeps a live dashboard current as new calls land.

"What is my market telling me, in real numbers?"

02 Set them up in order

- 1 Install Claude Code once (free, from Anthropic, at claude.com/claude-code). It's the shared home both tools run inside. Open Terminal, type `claude`, press Enter.
- 2 Run Content Brain first. It builds your vault and installs the small free tools both tools use, then ingests, transcribes, tags, and builds your Voice DNA.

/plugin marketplace add rolandfrasier/content-brain
```

```
/plugin install content-brain@dragonfly
```

```
/content-brain
```
- 3 Add Call Corpus Insights. Point it at your call transcripts. Keep calls in their own folder; Content Brain can generate them from recordings for you.

```
/plugin marketplace add rolandfrasier/Call-Corpus-Insights
```

```
/plugin install call-corpus-insights@dragonfly-calls
```

```
```
- 4 Use them together. Your Voice DNA tells you how to sound; your call dashboard tells you what to say. That pairing is the brief for everything you create next.

03 How they work together

One vault, one home

Both write into the same Obsidian vault Content Brain sets up. Nothing scattered, everything in one place you own.

Brain transcribes, Insights measures

Content Brain turns recorded calls into text; Call Corpus Insights then quantifies just the calls. Point it at your calls folder.

Voice + market = content

Voice DNA is how you sound. The dashboard is what your market keeps raising. Together they brief anything you write.

Both tools run entirely on your Mac. They ask before touching anything, and your data stays with you.
